FAQ'S

What are the Benefits of Registering with the NHBRC?

The most significant pro's to signing up with the NHBRC is that it helps you:

- Comply with South African legislation on Home Building, specifically the Housing Consumers Protection Measures Act, 1998 (Act No.95 of 1998).
- Get access to NHBRC training programs and resources.
- Be an accredited home builder which helps you apply for financial backing.
- Apply for Construction Contracts, Tenders, and RFQs in South Africa, because NHBRC Registration is often a requirement.
- Win new clients, as the NHBRC is a widely trusted organization that adds an extra layer of credibility to your clients.

Who needs to register with the NHBRC?

All Developers and Contractors that are involved with building residential dwellings, need to register with the NHBRC. That means if you have a construction company that offers some of the workmanship for a home-dwelling or if you're a subcontractor, you'll have to register. Additions and alterations are not covered by "the Act. Owner Builders must apply through the NHBRC for exemption.

Is NHBRC Registration compulsory?

According to The Housing Consumers Protection Measures Act of 1998 (Act No.95 of 1998), registering with the National Home Builders Registration Council (NHBRC) is compulsory if you're involved in building Residential Homes, Town Houses, Rented Houses, Flats, Maisonettes or Employee/Corporate Buildings.
